The Destroying Angel ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERS ARY OF THE BIRTH OF LONG TROUSERS

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

A Story of Mormon Mysteries and "Blood Atonement."

"The Lord God commands you not to pity the persons you kill, but to execute the law of God upon persons worthy of death. "Putting to death the transgressor would exhibit the law of God, no matter by whom it was done.

"There are sins that can be atoned for by an offering upon an altar, as in ancient days.

I WAS AT HER KNEES THAT MOMENT, BUT HER HANDS FELL LOOSELY IN MY GRASP.

mother cherished a different hope, and so do I.

"This is not the first time," said he, "that you have seen my furnaces alight. One morning, in the small hours, I saw you driving past; a delicate experiment miscarried; and I cannot acquit myself of having startled either your driver or the horse that drew you."

"What!" cried I, beholding again in fancy the antics of the figure, "could that be you?"

"It was I," he replied; "but do not fancy that I was mad. I was mad. I was in agony. I had been scalded cruelly."

I bowed, and passing by him, entered a vestibule or kitchen. It/shted by a good fire and a shaded reading-lamp. The distant furnaces began to throb and roar. I was frightened. I had scarce time to master my alarm when the doctor returned, and almost in the same moment my mother appeared upon the threshold. But how am I to describe to you the peace and ravishment of that face? Years seemed to have passed over her head during that brief ride, and left her younger and fairer; her syes shone, her smile went to my heart, she seemed no more a woman, but the angel of ecstatic tenderness. I ran to her in a kind of terror; but she shrunk a little back and laid her finger on helps, with something arch and yet unearthly. To the doctor, on the contrary, she reached gut her hand as to a friend and helpert; and so 'strange was the lepert and so 'strange was the lever' and so 'strange was the level and so 'strange was the level. The morning is a single story to a level of Landou for the transport of the small color of the earthly. To the doctor, on the contrary, she reached out her hand as to a friend she reached out her hand as to a friend and helper; and so 'strange was the scene that I forgot to be offended.

"Lucy," said the doctor, "all is prepared. Will you go alone, or shall your daughter follow us?"

"Let Asenath come," she answared, "dear Asenath! At this hour, when I am purified of fear and sorrow, and already survive myself and my affections, it is for your sake, and not for mine, it is for your sake, and not for mine, the standard dangerous paths among that I desire her presence. Were she shut out, dear friend, it is to be feared "Mother," I cried wildly, "mother, hat is this?" The doctor led us to a cond room.

It was very long. From end to end was lit up by many lamps, which by he changed color of their light, and by he incessant snapping sounds with which they burned, I have since divined to be electric. In one corner I perceived chair resting upon crystal feet, and suriously wreathed with wire. To this my mother advanced with a decisive swiftness.

"Is this it?" she asked.

The doctor bowed in silence.

"Asenath," said my mother, "in this sad end of my life I have found one helper. Look upon him: it is Dr. Grierson. Be not, ch, my daughter, be ot ungrateful to that friend."

When I was dressed the guide gave me a bag, which contained, he said, both more and papers, and, telling me that I was already over the borders in the territory of Wyoming, bade me follow the stream until I reached the rail-way station, half a mile below. "Here," he added. "is your ticket as far as Council Bluffs. The East express will pass in a few hours." With that he took both horses, and without further words or any salutation rode off by the way that we had come.

Three hours afterward I was scated on the end platform of the train as it swept eastward through the gorges and thundered in tunnels of the mountain.

I examined the contents of the bag. It was well supplied with gold; it contained tickets and complete directions for my journey as far as Liverpool, and a long letter from the doctor, supplying me with a fiction name and story, recommending the most guarded silence and bidding me to await faithfully the coming of his son.
